Dear Friends:

Picture this: It’s 1969, and a group of friends and civic leaders have been gathering on a regular basis to discuss establishing a community foundation.

Wouldn’t it have been fascinating to be in the room when Grant Brown stood up, threw $50 on the table, and said “It’s time to stop talking about this and just do it!” We could have seen firsthand what motivated these men. Were some of them reluctant because they had yet to make that month’s mortgage payment? Were some of them concerned if the community would support the idea? Were some of them bound and determined to make this work -- at least for a year or two?

Regardless of their motivation, would any of them have had the foresight that they were planting a seed that would ultimately grow into a foundation worth $27 million over the next 50 years? I know one of those in that room, my grandfather, would be astonished, pleased and proud if he were here today. It’s exciting to imagine the great things that will happen in the next 50 years with the seeds we continue to plant today.

We hope you enjoy this special 50th anniversary review of the wonderful things the Bryan Area Foundation has accomplished. It’s a great tribute to those who invested their time and treasure to make Bryan what it is today. Let’s use their inspiration as a springboard to see what great things we can accomplish over the next 50 years. In this case, I hope history does repeat itself.

The mission of the Bryan Area Foundation is to enhance the quality of life for all citizens of our area now and for generations to come by building community endowment, addressing needs through grant making, and serving as a leader, catalyst and resource for charitable giving.
The groundwork for establishing the Bryan Area Foundation began in early 1969. Lemuel Hawk, an Aro Corporation executive, and attorney John Dwyer asked Bryan’s Chamber of Commerce Board to appoint a committee to determine the feasibility of a community foundation. This group of enthusiastic leaders met regularly to conduct national research and interviews with other Ohio foundations. Lem Hawk, described by others as the driving force, and John Dwyer, who prepared the legal documents, effectively guided the organizational process. The Bryan Area Foundation’s Articles of Incorporation were filed on December 12, 1969. Selected members representing a broad range of occupations and community service soon held their first meeting and election of officers. Thanks to their volunteer spirit, commitment and vision, the wheels were set in motion for five decades of growing donor endowment, making possible a multitude of community projects. The following pages outline the foundation’s journey and continued dedication to honor the mission of its founders, “For the good of Bryan...forever.” This publication is dedicated to them, the original “Big Dreamers.”

The first four presidents of the Bryan Area Foundation pictured L to R are Bruce Benedict, Lem Hawk, Dick Reed, and Ted Spangler. They were honored at the 20th anniversary of the foundation in 1989. All were founding members, and each committed to a five-year term to ensure continuity and community trust in the foundation’s formative years.

This publication is dedicated to the original “Big Dreamers.”
In the 1970s, author Tom Wolfe wrote his famous novel about U.S. astronauts who had pioneered the exploration of space culminating with the moon landing of 1969. It was titled The Right Stuff. 1969 was a stellar year for the country and the Bryan community with the founding of the Bryan Area Foundation. Surely the founders and early members of the BAF could be described as possessing “the right stuff” to firmly establish, nurture and grow the foundation. Their successful launch could also be attributed to Bryan’s prosperous agricultural, commercial and industrial base and community support for exceptional schools, parks, library and the arts.

The 23 founders got to work in earnest. President Lem Hawk and secretary John Dwyer created a code of regulations to guide members in the governance process. Mr. Hawk was insistent that the foundation have no administrative expense and always said, “We must be as pure as motherhood and apple pie.” The Aro Corporation produced printed materials for the foundation, and officers maintained records in their own offices.
Within the first year, the initial deposit of $500 grew to over $17,000 from 206 donations. A campaign to encourage the community to make “founding donations” of $25 was a big success. The Bryan Times published the names of donors, and Ford Cullis, its publisher and founding member, assured the public that “The Bryan Times is squarely behind the Bryan Area Foundation as I hope you will be.” The foundation presented its first grant of $200 to Outreach, a local emergency assistance organization.

A Toledo Blade writer soon came to interview founders, noting in his feature article how Bryan was one of only 26 community foundations in Ohio. Assets grew, and the BAF awarded scholarships and grants, including $15,000 to the Bryan Community Hospital building fund and $10,000 for the beautification of the courthouse square. In December 1979, Ted Spangler, the Bryan Area Foundation’s second president, welcomed members to the 10th anniversary celebration honoring donors of numerous funds.

Blazing the Trail

The 1980s were fraught with record highs including interest rates, unemployment percentages and stock market losses. Despite financial challenges, BAF assets grew along with community awareness. Foundation members quietly blazed the trail in support of their mission by demonstrating the benefits of donor endowment. "Your gift will be good for Bryan, for good." By 1989 bequests and memorials grew from 14 to 73.

Bruce Benedict became the third president in 1981 and agreed to serve until the foundation reached $1 million in assets. By 1986, assets reached well over the million dollar mark and Richard Reed began his term as president. The foundation presented the largest grant to date of $100,000 to the building committee of the YWCA. Grants for the new school track and field, library, and courthouse made headlines. An ever-growing number of high school graduates received memorial scholarships reaching $27,000 in 1989.

"A memorial gift goes into action the instant it enters the foundation and outlasts the finest monument."

- Bruce Benedict

The BAF granted $20,000 to the Bryan High School track and field in 1988.
In 1990 BAF President Richard Reed announced that donor endowment had reached $2 million. The explosion of technology brought higher productivity and personal income, impacting the Bryan area’s capacity for philanthropy. At the 25th anniversary celebration, BAF President Wayne Shaffer praised the asset growth without any fund raising or solicitation. He likened it to a quote from a popular baseball movie, Field of Dreams, “If you build it, they will come.” Assets were over $4 million. Mr. Shaffer was the fifth president to lead a doubling of the BAF endowment.

The dream of a playground in Recreation Park attracted over 2500 volunteers in 1994. The BAF awarded $45,000 to help the community come together to build the Imagination Station.

In 1999, with an endowment approaching $8 million, the BAF operated in a small rent free office with volunteer members. Recognizing the need for professional growth and advice, President Tom Herman and a facilitator from The Donors Forum led members in a day long retreat. They identified concepts of a successful foundation including a permanent office and professional staff.

The Arts and Education Center received a total of $250,000 in grants over several years.
The national tragedy of 9/11 and a catastrophic recession marred the beginning and end of the decade, but the Bryan Area Foundation held firm. Many large BAF grants laid the foundations for facilities rising to fulfill big dreams and enrich thousands of lives. The BAF hired its first and second directors, and three area foundations became affiliates. Members established an office at 516 East High Street. Community leaders met in focus groups in 2007 to provide the BAF with prioritized needs. The BAF protected donor funds by suspending grants throughout the 2008 recession.

Building Community

With the rebounding of the U.S. financial markets, the BAF resumed awarding grants in 2011, including the largest to date for expansion of the YMCA. Board members also focused on another part of their mission, “serving as a leader, catalyst and resource for charitable giving.” The William Isaac Event and the Community Expo strengthened ties with a broader community. The BAF established two affiliate groups: Power in the Purse, a women’s giving circle, and the 2020 Club, a group of monthly investors with a project goal. Jack Brace became CEO in 2013. A new downtown office opened in 2014 at 110 S. Walnut Street, providing visibility and convenience.

The YMCA received a $500,000 grant, the largest awarded to date, for expansion in 2016.

Total Assets
2019: $27.3 million

Total Grants & Scholarships
2019: $12.3 million

- Press box at Golden Bear Stadium $75,000 - 2013
- Stadium lights at BHS soccer field $75,000 - 2017
Jack Brace, a Bryan native, brought a wealth of banking and financial management experience to the Bryan Area Foundation when he became CEO in 2013.

Community Expo - 2014 The BAF held a Community Expo to celebrate its 45th anniversary. Participants showcased their nonprofit organizations and answered questions for the public. Attendees voted for their favorite exhibits, and the BAF awarded a total of $15,000 to the BAF endowment funds of the five winning organizations.

Awarding Student Achievement - 2018 The BAF granted scholarships totaling $196,550 to area high schools from 96 scholarship funds. Pictured are Bryan High School recipients at the 2018 awards ceremony.

“We are more than just a charitable ATM. We are a philanthropic leader and convener. We provide a hub for donors, grant seekers, nonprofit organizations and even government to come together to share ideas and advance projects that will move our community forward.”

2010-2019
“We cannot always build a future for our youth, but we can always build our youth for the future.” This year as we celebrate the foundation’s 50th anniversary, we have taken these words of Franklin D. Roosevelt to heart and have shared the message of the Bryan Area Foundation in our local schools. Through the “Expressions of Gratitude” and “Classroom to Community” programs, including 150 seventh graders and many high school students interviewing our members, students learned about philanthropy and how the foundation has made a difference in our community. The potential of the foundation is unlimited as we share and cultivate this message with our future leaders of tomorrow.

Project 2020 and Power in the Purse are great examples of what can be accomplished with the power of collective giving. Project 2020 will have accumulated over $260,000 to fund their project, and Power in the Purse continues to support our community with over $22,000 given annually.

Our founding fathers would be proud of how successful their dream of a community foundation has become. Fifty years later our community has benefited from over $12 million given back for projects and scholarships that make the Bryan area a better place to live, work and play. As we move forward, the challenge is not only to keep their dream alive but also to pursue innovative and creative ways to further our mission and inspire our community to DREAM BIG!

President/CEO

Expressions of Gratitude: I am thankful for...

The Bryan Area Foundation joins area students in expressing gratitude to our donors who have made these and hundreds of other community projects possible.
Dream Launcher Grants - In celebration of its 50th anniversary, the BAF awarded more than $50,000 to 25 area nonprofits including a grant for new instruments for the Bryan City Band.

Commitment to the Community - Northwest State Community College Foundation honored the Bryan Area Foundation with the “Making a Difference Award” in 2019.

Nonprofit Workshops - The BAF collaborated with United Way of Williams County and Shalom Counseling and Mediation Center to sponsor four nonprofit workshops.

Power in the Purse (PIP) - A women’s giving circle was established in 2016. Annually PIP gives over $22,000 to local nonprofits.

Classroom to Community - The BAF shared concepts of philanthropy with students from kindergarten through high school.

To commemorate its 50th anniversary, the Bryan Area Foundation donated bike racks and benches for the downtown square, the library and the parks. May they be a useful reminder of the contributions made by many foundation donors to enrich community lives.
